The Journal says: The question of bringing Belfast and the Bluehill mining region into close business relationship is being agitated. [illegible] Bluehill to Brooksville, a distance of ten miles will be built. With a good steamer that can make the run across the bay in one hour to connect with the road at Brooksville, Belfast will be just ninety minutes from Bluehill. No other railroad point in Maine can be brought so close to Bluehill as our own city. It is a settled fact that Bluehill is the best mining region in Maine, a large number of people are now engaged there. All the provisions and material used are carted across the country, and principally from Bangor. It is thought the Maine Central railroad, with its usual shrewdness, would help such an enterprise as it would receive much benefit therefrom. Belfast business men would be directly benefited and should give the contemplated enterprise their hearty support.

The Age says dogs are raising mischief with sheep. Mr. Vickery of Unity had nineteen killed one day lately.

The Belfast Journal says Dr. P. A. Crooker, of Searsport, was thrown from his carriage on Monday last, and very severely injured. The injury consists of a scalp wound eight and a quarter inches in length and four inches across the head, forming the letter V. The skin was torn from the scalp and laid back over the back of the head.

FASHION NOTES

Dead-white has been rechristened "snow-drop," which is certainly prettier.

The apron fronts gathered at the top and spreading thence to the hem of the skirt are called palm leaves, because they suggest the fan of that name.

Colored linen handkerchiefs are bordered with white lace, and have the owner's name embroidered in script, either in white or in a darker color.

A pretty way of fastening the straps across a puffed or shirred waistcoat is to fasten them high on one side and low on the other, instead of straight across.

The jersey glove is in high favor for traveling. It can be bought in old gold, gray and tan, so that it is easy to find a pair to harmonize with any gown. They are long enough to reach the elbow, and have no buttons.

SATURDAY JULY 23, 1881.

REPUBLICAN MAJORITY IN THE NEXT HOUSE.

The Boston Herald's Washington correspondent makes the following interesting statement concerning the composition of the next House of Representatives:

WASHINGTON, July 21, 1881. A careful examination of the election returns shows that the Republicans are likely to have a majority of at least 20 over the Democrats in organizing the next House, so that the election of Miller and Lapham in New York to the Senate cannot imperil the control of the House, even if there should be no election in their districts before Congress meets. There will probably be 153 votes for the Republican candidate for Speaker, against 131 for the Democratic candidate. To make this number of Republican votes, it is necessary to assume that the Republicans will elect a successor to Frye in Maine and to Morton, Miller and Lapham in New York, and that Hyatt Smith of New York, together with one Greenback Republican from Pennsylvania, two Readjusters from Virginia, and four Republican Greenbackers from Missouri, will all vote for the Republican candidate. Murch of Maine and Jones of Texas are expected to go with the Democrats. From this it will be seen that even if the Democrats should carry Frye's district in Maine and Morton's district in New York, and gather in all the Greenbackers, they could only muster 144 votes against 146 on the other side, without either Miller's or Lapham's districts. But they cannot get the Greenback votes or the Readjuster votes. Some of these may not be given for the Republican candidate, but he is bound to win in that case a plurality of at least 12 over the Democratic candidate.

The Boston Post's Washington special reports of the next House as follows:

The Republicans have 148 members of the next House of Representatives, without Miller, Lapham or Morton or Frye of Maine, so that the election of Senators in New York does not affect the House at all. The Democrats have now exactly 120 votes they can depend on to vote for their candidate for Speaker, and, if they should carry the four vacant districts in New York and Frye's district in Maine, they would still be in a minority. It is claimed that should the Republicans save their four vacant districts, they open the House with a majority of 20 members, while, if there is no election in the three New York districts, there will still be at least 25 majority. There is no foundation for the belief that the Greenbackers hold the balance of power in the next House.

[From the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, ultra-Democratic, July 13.]

BLAINE OF MAINE.

Among the names often mentioned in the telegrams in connection with the shooting of President Garfield, none have met with a kindlier reception than that of James G. Blaine, of Maine. Blaine, while a member of the Senate, and still more while a member of the House, stood in bad odor with the South. He was combative in the extreme, and was constantly in a row with one or another of the Southern representatives, and the Southern press sympathizing with their own people, poured a constant stream of abuse upon the member from the Pine Woods. The first indication Blaine gave of a patriotic feeling was on a visit to Richmond, where he fascinated every one who came in personal contact with him. Then just before and during the Chicago convention, Blaine took arms for the whole country against the aggressive tendencies of the Grantites, and nobly did he battle against the dark powers of third-termism and consolidation. Like Samson of old, finding he could not escape from the powers, he, by a giant effort, brought the temple down on his devoted head, crushing his enemies and his own hopes at one blow. His action disarmed all his Southern opponents. He convinced every one that he loved a country, and that party could not make him forget it. His opportunities were good to have united the Republicans on himself, had he consented to be the tool of the stalwarts. But he repelled the thought, and took a bold conservative stand. In Mr. Garfield's contest with the radical Republicans he was the Joshua who supported his arms by his wisdom and influence. It was Blaine who was aimed at in all the conflict. They recognized his powerful influence over the President, and all their measures were taken to alienate the Chief from him. The crowning glory of Blaine's actions came with the wounding of the President. He has, throughout the trying scenes that followed the shooting, done his duty without ostentation or thought of praise. He has, as far as possible, kept out of the gaze of the public, and, considering the high place he occupies, he has succeeded most admirably. At the time of the shooting he showed more self-possession than any of the bystanders. He did not hesitate to rush at the assassin, though the chances were greatly in his favor for being shot, and so soon as he saw him secured, he went to the prostrate chief, and the sensible course pursued at the time was largely due to him, and it may be, the life of the President is due to the coolness and self-possession there shown. During those hours of suspense and anxiety which followed the shooting, Blaine has preserved a dignified manner, full of eloquent sensibility, and at the same time unobtrusive and modest. He has refused to avail himself of the opportunity to parade himself in the public eye, as he could easily have done as Secretary of State, but surrendered that place to the doctors. Without the officious intermeddling so many sought, he persistently stood near, ready to do anything to be done, and that in a sensible manner. With quiet sympathy and modesty, he has encouraged the President and sustained his courage to bear whatever was necessary to be borne. The President relied on him throughout. When Blaine was in the room he felt his courage lightened. Though public sentiment was getting strongly in his favor before this occurred, he has risen greatly since, and the South, ever ready to forget and forgive, gladly takes him by the hand and numbers him, not as one of those who have sought their favor for the purposes of political advancement, but as a man trying to do his duty fearlessly and faithfully, regardless of personal consequences.

A friend in Tennessee has sent us a copy of the Nashville Banner of July 13, from which we reprint the leading editorial on "Blaine of Maine." As the Banner is an ultra Democratic paper its expressions of kind feeling toward Secretary Blaine is sufficiently unusual to be striking, and the fact of its emanation from so pronounced a political opponent renders it all the more significant a tribute to the splendid manner in which our great leader has borne himself throughout the recent severe ordeal.

Necessary to a choice 67

Senator Jacobs moved that the convention take a recess till half past one Car...

The chair said he had been requested to announce that the Democratic members would hold a conference immediately, and that the Republicans would do the same The convention then took a recess

The Republicans of both Houses of the Legislature, during the recess of the convention met in the Assembly chamber On motion of Senator Robertson Senator McCarthy was called to the chair, on motion of Mr Skinner Senator Loomis and Assemblymen Congdon and Lawrence were appointed secretaries On motion of Senator Robertson the roll was answered

The following Senators were absent: Astor, Braman, Lidman, Halbert, Lynde, Pitts, Schroeder, Straban Wendover, Williams, and Winslow, and Assemblymen Baker, Brahmac, Brodsky, Butler, Cowles Crasper, Evans, Gillette, Holt, Peck Root D Russell Trimble, Van Buren and Young.

Mr Skinner moved that the roll be called for nominating a candidate for the U S Senate to be voted for in the next joint convention.

Mr Draper offered as a substitute that is the sense of the conference that the caucus committee should call a caucus for this afternoon and that a special committee be appointed to request the caucus committee to make the call and in case of refusal on the part of the caucus committee the special committee call the caucus He sustained his resolution by arguing that a caucus must be had and intimated that unless it was held he and other stalwarts would retire.

Mr Hayes also opposed turning this conference into a caucus, but maintained that it was in the power of this conference to call a caucus

Senator Robertson stated that he had been requested to call this conference and was assured by those making the request that they would abide by its results

Mr Carpenter in arguing for a caucus, said that there was less than a majority present.

The Chair called on the Secretary to announce how many were present, and he said there were seventy-two, which was over a majority.

Mr. Robertson said he was now told if this conference would adjourn to 5 P M to-day they would all come in and join with the others.

Mr Woodin asked how many had said this? It might be only two. There were numbers here who refused to answer, to their names

Senator Halbert asked that his name be called It was called and he said the crisis had now arrived If there was not union now the Republican party of the state state would be hopelessly divided. He was for union and harmony. His remarks were received with great applause. Pitts said the time had come for action and no more talk of the past ought to be indulged in. (Applause) He wanted the roll called and each member to name his choice. (Applause)

The question was taken on Draper's motion after he had changed the time for the caucus to 3 P. M. and Senator Woodin favored it, saying that the time could be well spent in shaking hands over the bright prospects in view, and it was carried.

So the conference took a recess to 3 P. M Both Senate and Assembly took a recess till 4 o clock.

At 3 05 P. M. the Republican conference re-assembled, Senator McCarthy in the Chair Twenty-one Senators and 49 Assemblymen answered to the roll call.

Mr. Skinner's motion that the roll be called and each member rise and name his candidate for United States Senator was carried.

Elbridge G. Lapham was named by 61 members, Roscoe Conkling by 27, S L Woodford by one, Wm M. Evarts one. The vote is the same as that cast in the joint convention.

On motion of Senator Winslow, Elbridge G Lapham's nomination was made unanimous amid cheers and great applause, swinging of hats, etc.

There were then loud calls for Senator Woodin who rose and congratulated the assemblage upon the result attained and spoke in glowing terms of the effect of the action just taken.

Halbert, Pitts, Sharpe, Husted and Reine followed in a congratulatory and joyful strain on the happy reunion of the party.

The End of the Struggle.

The joint convention met at 4 P. M. and proceeded to vote for U. S. Senators with the following results Senate, Lapham 22 Potter 5, Assembly, Lapham 70, Potter 37, total, Lapham 92 Potter 42 Necessary to choice, 68 The chair announced that Elbridge G Lapham was elected and declared the joint assembly dissolved Cheers were given for Lapham, Miller, Garfield Conkling and Potter In the assembly, after the dissolution of the convention, a resolution for a final adjournment to-morrow, was passed The Senate resolution, providing for an amendment to the State constitution making canals free also passed. The Senate adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Burying the Hatchet.

The Half breed club and Grant club (stalwarts) serenaded Senators elect Miller and Lapham at the Delavan House, to night A large concourse was present and speeches were made by both Senators and others The best of feeling prevailed, all bitterness of the late campaign being buried

RESCUED FROM DEATH

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass says In the fall of 1876 I was taken with BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar At one time a report went around that I was dead I gave up hope but a friend told me of DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS I got a bottle when to my surprise I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will take DR WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. dlt&w no3 mar12

A GOOD INTRODUCTION

Favorite Remedy was introduced into Connecticut in 1877, at the solicitation of Rev J G Smith, of Hartford, who, after having suffered for years from Chronic Liver Disease and Indigestion, obtained the medicine and was cured. This faithful pastor, thinking of the bodies as well as the souls of his people, at once commenced the advocacy of "Favorite Remedy" among them, and has been the happy instrument of saving scores of lives Favorite Remedy is now as well and favorably known in Connecticut as along the Hudson One dollar a bottle All druggists have it. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y d&w2w jy13

A FOOL ONCE MORE

"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff Six months ago I saw a U S flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays —H. W, Detroit, Mich —Free Press.

A PUBLIC DUTY.

We are not in the habit of puffing any sort of patent medicines in our columns, for the business of a newspaper is to let people know what is going on in the world, and not to lend aid to what may be an imposition. But we happen to know Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and can personally testify to the excellence of the medicine which the doctor calls "Favorite Remedy." And if a word of ours will persuade anybody to use it, and thus find relief from suffering, no professional etiquette shall hinder us from saying that word. For diseases of the blood, kidneys and bowels it has no equal. We would not be without it for five times the dollar that it costs —Daily Times

EDUCATED WOMEN.

Refined and educated women will sometimes suffer in silence for years from kidney diseases, or constipation and piles, which could easily be cured by a package of Kidney-Wort. There is hardly a woman to be found that does not at some time suffer from some of the diseases for which this great remedy is a specific. It is put up in liquid and dry forms, equally efficient.—Springfield Union.

PURCHASE OF MT. MICA. The Argus says Dr. A. C Hamlin, of Bangor, Saturday, purchased of the proprietor, O Bowker, Esq, the old Bowker farm, situated on Paris Hill On this farm is the famous Mt. Mica, noted among mineralogists for its deposits of rare mineral, the best of their kind found anywhere The green and red tourmalines taken from this place have found their way into the collections of Europe, and are much admired Dr. Hamlin tried to buy Mt. Mica separate from the farm, but the owner would sell the whole or none. This deposit of rare minerals was discovered by Hon Elijah L Hamlin, father of the doctor, many years ago, and his attachment to the spot was one of the causes which led to its recent purchase The doctor will continue the hunt for rare minerals.

ALMOST A FATAL CASUALTY. On Wednesday last, while Prof. Gould, of Newton Theological Seminary and Prof. Stevens, of Rochester Theological Seminary, with their wives, were out rowing at Hancock Point, their boat, in some way which we were unable to learn, was capsized and all were thrown into the water. They clung to the boat, but as there was no one in the vicinity who saw the accident, it was an hour before they were discovered and rescued. Meanwhile Mrs. Gould, who is a very heavy woman, had three times been got into the boat, but as often fallen out again, and when at last deliverance came she was in a state of unconsciousness. She was taken to the MacFarland House, where the party are stopping, and consciousness was restored, All are now doing well and rejoicing over their narrow escape from a watery grave.

BAND CONCERT AND BAND STAND The Band concert did not take place last evening, the weather being unfavorable A concert will be given Tuesday evening if the skies are propitious but whether on the Park or at the Bangor House will depend on circumstances The leader says the members of the Band are willing to give free concerts occasionally, but that there is really no suitable place for them to play The band stand in Centre Park is unfit, there are no steps by which to mount it and no arrangement for holding lanterns, besides which it is considered unsafe The outlay of a few dollars would place the stand in a respectable condition As it is now it is useless If we cannot afford a band stand that would compare favorably with those in our country villages why not have the old one repaired?

A HANDSOME PRESENT We saw, last evening, at the store of W I Mann a very fine life size crayon portrait of the late gallant Col Douty, of the First Maine Cavalry Col Douty was one of the bravest of the many brave officers of the Volunteer Army, and was killed on the 17th of June, 1863 at the engagement at Aldie, Va, while charging at the head of his command under a murderous fire of grape and canister The Post of the G A R, at Dover his old home is named Post Douty in his honor and his widow has had this portrait drawn to be presented to the Post It is from the easel of Miss Nellie Mann and its fine execution and lifelike and natural appearance adds another to the many artistic triumphs of our talented young artist

THE EXCURSION YESTERDAY A gentleman who went with the excursion of the First Parish Congregational Mission Sabbath School, yesterday reports as follows The excursion of this Society with their friends on the new steamer Queen City, was a success, the company being large and enjoyable and the weather bright and cheerful After touching at Fort Point and Northport, the steamer proceeded to Islesboro where the excursionists received kind and courteous attention from the happy cottagers for which thanks are returned On the return trip the party made a call at Castine, or old 'Bagaduce and viewed the attractions of the now thriving place The Queen City proved to be worthy of all that has been said in her praise being new, bright and clean, speedy, quiet and steady, and the management in all respects satisfactory

RUM AND ROWDYISM The usually quiet neighborhood in the vicinity of Lowder Block, on Hammond street, was yesterday noon the scene of some excitement It appears that a man known as Bill Peasley, who was under the influence of liquor, visited Lowder Block, with a revolver in his hand, with the avowed determination to shoot a little dog kept about the premises and which Peasley claimed had bitten him twice Mr Gilligan, the proprietor of the premises warned Peasley away, but he continued his disturbance and an officer was sent for, but before a policeman could arrive a young man who was with Peasley and who was somewhat intoxicated, assaulted Mr Gilligan, striking him in the face Peasley was arrested for carrying concealed weapons and his companion for assault and battery Peasley broke away from the officer but was captured on Fifth street

MAINE SPORTSMEN'S ASSOCIATION The Maine Sportsmen's Association is arranging for its first annual tournament to come off early in September The Secretary sent circulars to manufacturers and dealers in sporting goods the first of this week calling their attention to the proposed tournament, and has thus early received donations from the American Powder Company, Boston, of one keg (25 lbs) of Dead shot powder and from the American Arms Company, Boston manufacturers of the celebrated Fox gun, four of their new semi hammerless guns The tournament will undoubtedly call together the largest assemblage of our sportsmen ever yet assembled The programme will be altogether different from anything yet attempted in this State while the prize list bids fair to be large and valuable A meeting of the Executive Committee will be called in August, to arrange a programme and decide where the tournament shall be held, which will probably be at Augusta —Argus

IMPORTANT TO COASTERS The volume of Supreme Court reports just issued contains a decision which is interesting to those engaged in coasting business between two ports in the same State A steamer running between San Francisco and San Diego both in California, was wrecked and the shippers of the cargo sued the owners of the craft to recover the value A law of Congress limits the liability of an owner of a vessel to his interest in the value of the vessel and freight, and the owners of the vessel invoked the benefit of the law. The shippers held that the law did not apply to this case because the steamer was employed in commerce wholly within the State of California On the contrary the ship owners held that it did apply because the steamer was navigating the high seas. The Supreme Court sustained the latter position, holding that the ocean belongs to no one nation and a vessel crossing it engages in a navigation necessarily connected with other nations and during which her national character is only recognized and she is subject to such laws as the commercial nations of the world have established for commerce. Navigation upon the high seas is national in its character, and must therefore be subject to the national government.

DEATH OF JOSEPH OAKES We regret to announce, this morning, the death of Joseph Oakes, Esq, which occurred in Brewer yesterday at the age of about sixty-six years. Probably no man on the river had a wider circle of acquaintances, or was more highly esteemed by all who have ever had business intercourse with him, than Mr Oakes. Engaged for the past forty years in the business of building and repairing vessels, his enterprise and energy have probably made business for more men in his line of business than any other man upon the river. In times of depression, when no one else would be found with sufficient courage to lay the keel of a vessel, he has gone forward and laid keel after keel, giving employment to many men, and support to many families who otherwise know not where to look during the long winter-months either for employment or support. He was a man whose integrity was never questioned, but all who dealt with him gave him the credit of being a thoroughly honest man. He will be much missed and deeply lamented, not only by his fellow townsmen of Brewer, but by a widely extended circle of acquaintance. His funeral will take place from his late residence in Brewer on Sunday at two o'clock in the afternoon. Masters of vessels in port are requested to display their colors at half-mast on the day of the funeral.

We were pleased to receive a call yesterday from Samuel P. Dinsmore, Esq, editor of the New York Stockholder, and formerly editor of the Bangor Mercury. Mr. Dinsmore is spending a few days among his old friends in Bangor, and his genial presence revives many pleasant recollections of other days.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

After a foggy morning and a clearing off thunder shower the sun shines brightly and a beautiful day is given us dwellers down by the sea The season is late and just fairly opening About two-thirds of the cottages are open and the others are filling Several have pitched their tents and are roughing it

It is especially lively to-day with an excursion from Bangor in the Queen City, and also one in the barge and tug, and a large one from Rockland in the Pioneer A rumor has circulated somewhat to the effect that excursions would not be allowed to land, which it is needless to say is entirely false

The bay is swarming with mackerel and it is the pleasure and practice of the dwellers here to have tinkers in all styles at all hours and they are the most toothsome denizens of the deep They have been and now are caught by the score from the wharf which is daily black with fishers

The first number of Vol 3 of the Sea Breeze will be out Saturday of this week, It is larger than last year. Copies may be found at Bughee's

A TERRIBLE CASE OF SUFFERING.

The dreadful suffering of a man with Cholera Morbus was painfully illustrated in New York a few days ago, when an individual from the rural districts who had been filling himself with all sorts of good but undigestible things was struck down on Broadway and had to be carried into a hotel, where two doctors worked with him for an hour before he was out of danger. A teaspoonful or two of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER, and a flannel cloth saturated with the medicine and applied to his stomach, would have relieved him almost instantly.

Nothing in the science of medicine equals the relief obtained by the use of Dr. Graves' Balsam of Wild Cherry and Tar for coughs, colds, sore throat, whooping cough, bronchitis, consumption, etc. It gives immediate relief, is pleasant to take, and occasions no unpleasant nauseating feelings. Sample bottle, 10 cents; large size, 50 cents.

Dr. Graves' Blood Purifier eradicates all impurities from the system, cleanses the blood, renovates the liver and stomach, which from being torpid and inert, by its use become unusually stimulated, and, in fact gives a healthy tone to the entire system. Price, $1.

Improved Family Cathartic Pills are the best pill ever given a patient by a physician, and they are frequently prescribed by them. They give prompt action to the bowels, contain no mercury, and are entirely vegetable. When you desire a prompt action of the bowels, give the Improved Family Carthartic Pills a trial Price, 25 cts. per box. Dr. Graves' remedies are for sale by Bangor Druggists.

"That's it," interrupted Mrs. Bliss— ...se husband was one of the 'pillars' ...the Methodist church. 'She thought ...e of him than she did of her salvation ...he was taken from her that her heart ...t might be softened."

"...t she seems harder than ever," said Randall. "She won't listen to words ...comfort or anything else. No one can ...e any impression on her. "Yes," giggled Mrs. Cowan, hysterical... "she'd rather have my room than my ...pany any day. How-someever, I don't ...her no hard feelin's. I done what I ...ld for her."

"What is the use? What can you do? ...won't we done everything?" chorused other ladies.

"I think I shall ask her to ten," said ...Keziah thoughtfully.

"Ask her to ten!" repeated half a dozen ...shed steners.

"Yes, none of you tried that, I believe," ...ered Miss Keziah.

"She won't come," said Mrs Bliss.

"Perhaps not, but all the same it won't ...e harm to ask her."

"I hope you'll try to soften her heart ...bring her to the prayer meetin' ...r day night," said Miss Cowan.

Miss Keziah made no answer, but a pe...liar look crossed her homely, good na...ed face—a look Miss Pauline did not ...e understand.

Miss Keziah'll be wise to make no ...mises," said Mrs Bliss. "It stands to ...son that she won't succeed where all ...e rest of us have failed. One might as ...l talk to a stone as to Mrs Denton."

Miss Keziah sighed, and bent her eyes ...on her work. She had known what ...Sorley was once, and she knew that, ...ile sorrow and pain softens some na...res, it hardens and embitters others.

Mrs. Denton lived entirely alone on the ...tskirts of the village, in a little, old, ...other beaten house she had bought when ...first came to Briarville, ten years be...e. Weeds grew tall and rank in the ...rd, the sunken steps leading to the door ...re half buried in vines, the well curb ...s broken, the gate fallen to the ground, ...fact, everything about the place spoke ...n and decay.

Not a very cheerful place certainly," ...ttered Miss Keziah, as the day follow... the meeting of the sewing circle, she ...rove up to the Widow Denton's, and ...ached her horse to the tumble-down fence ...ich partially inclosed the yard. "Now, ...tty, you sit right still till I come back. ...don't start old Moll."

Hetty was a diminutive niece of Miss ...eziah's, a golden haired, blue-eyed child ...six years of age, who had been left to ...er aunt as the sole legacy of an only sis...r.

Miss Keziah walked up the moss grown ...th and knocked loudly on Mrs. Denton's ...or.

Before her knuckles had fairly left it the ...or was flung open by Mrs. Denton her...self, who stood silently regarding her vis...tor, with an expression of resentment and ...d gnat on.

"How d'ye do, Miss Denton? I'm Miss ...eziah Fletcher. Perhaps you've heard ...ll of me before. I was at Helmstone a ...ne derable spell, an' since I got back I've ...een laid by with the rheumatiz, or I'd ...ve called before. I come to see if you'd ...ke tea at my house to-night. I'll make ...od comfortable, an' it'll be a sort of change ...r you."

Mrs. Denton made no reply. She stood ...aring at her visitor as if she had not ...eard her words. Then her eyes wandered to the gate, and felt at last upon the ...pring wagon and its small occupant, whose golden curls were escaping from the close calico sunbonnet which shielded her pretty face from the noonday sun.

"Is that your child?" she asked abrupt... but without taking her gaze from Hetty. There was a hungry, yearning look in her eyes as she spoke, a tremor in her voice.

"Land sakes! No indeed!" ejaculated Miss Keziah, with withering scorn in her tone. "I never was married. Thoroughly man I ever cared a straw for was drowned at sea, and those that cared for me was mercenary in their views. Hetty's my sister Jane's child. Jane, she died to Helmstone some six months back. Come, won't you jump in the wagon and go with me? I didn't like to be disappointed in havin' you to tea; so I made all ready for you."

"Yes, I'll come," said Mrs. Denton, withdrawing her gaze from Hetty, who was grasping the reins with ludicrous carnestness, as if the steadiness of old Moll depended upon her.

She went into the house and put on an old fashioned straw bonnet and a faded black merino shawl. Then she walked down the path and climbed into the wagon after Miss Keziah, without uttering a word.

"You forgot to lock your door," said the careful spinster, as she took the reins from Hetty's little hands.

A bitter smile curled Mrs Denton's lips. "I never lock it," she said; "there is nothing in the house worth stealing."

The two women jogged along the quiet country road, with the child between them, Miss Keziah talking on different subjects, in her kind, sensible, whole-hearted way. She did not allude to her visitor's sorrows, nor did she mention the visits paid to the lonely cottage by other members of the sewing circle.

A man took the horse when they reached Miss Keziah's farm, which was a mile from the centre of the town, and one of the finest in the country. It was well cultivated, well stocked with fruits of various kinds, and its buildings were all comfortable and roomy, the house itself being built of stone, in a substantial, old fashioned manner.

Miss Keziah led the way into her sitting room, and helped her visitor take off her bonnet and shawl.

"I have this easy chair, Mrs Denton," she said with great cordiality, "and make yourself to home. I've got to see to supper, but I guess Hetty can amuse you a spell. Hetty, mind you're good while I'm gone."

She left the room and was absent nearly half an hour. When she returned Mrs Denton had Hetty on her lap, and was telling her a fairy story. The first smile the poor woman's face had worn for nearly a year, rushed on it as she looked up at Miss Keziah's entrance, and said: "She reminds me so much of my little Bertha. You can't tell the good it does me just to hold her in my arms—they have been empty so long."

A deep sigh followed the words.

"I'm glad she hasn't bothered you," said Miss Keziah, cheerfully. "But now come in to tea. I guess you're pretty nigh famished waiting for it."

A sumptuous repast was in readiness. Broiled chicken, cold ham, light biscuit, apple sauce and pumpkin pies, doughnuts, pound cake and cookies composed the bill of fare, including with every variety of sweetmeat and condiment preserves, pickles, honey and cheese. Miss Keziah could not have arranged a better feast had she been expecting a bishop to tea instead of a poor widow whose stony heart she wished to soften.

With a cordial smile the spinster motioned her guest to a seat and, after putting Hetty in a high chair, sat down herself at the head of the table and reverently asked a blessing.

"I didn't put up as many kinds of preserves as usual this year," she observed, as she helped Mrs. Denton to plum jelly. "I ain't the woman I used to be by a long way. Rheumatiz do lay holt on a body so! I'm in bed or on crutches half the time. I calkerlate I'll have to give up the farm if I don't mend. I did let on having Jane here to manage everything for me; but, poor thing, the fever carried her off all to once just as she got free o' that ornery husband o'hers. I'd hate to give up, though. Jane and me were both born here, and I've never known no other home."

When supper was over the two women walked about the yard, and made a tour of the garden, and admired the cows as they came leisurely up to the barn yard to be milked. Then Mrs. Denton remarked that it was growing late, and she must hurry home.

"What's the need of your going?" asked Miss Keziah. "I've got four spare rooms, and would be glad if they were all full. Suppose you stay all night?"

Mrs Denton hesitated. She thought of her lonely, neglected house peopled with the ghosts of her dead children, and contrasted it with it is bright, home like place, where a child's sweet voice made music.

"Do stay," said little Hetty, clinging to the visitor's dress.

This decided the poor, heart-broken woman.

"I will, and I thank you for asking me, Miss Keziah. I have not deserved such kindness."

That night after Hetty had gone to bed, the two women sat talking in the large sitting-room in which an open fire made cheerful and bright. Gradually Mrs Denton was led to speak of her children, all now resting in their narrow graves in the village cemetery. She spoke of their uniform goodness and love for herself, but said little of her grief at losing them. Her voice sounded harsh and strange to Miss Keziah, who understood the effort for control the poor woman was making.

"Poor soul! you've seen a sight of trouble, I know," the spinster said softly, and she put her hands tenderly on those of her guest, which were clasped hard together.

There was deep silence for a few moments, unbroken save by the ticking of the eight-day clock in the corner. Then suddenly Mrs Denton threw herself at Miss Keziah's feet, and broke into bitter weeping. Hoarse sobs tore away from her breast, and her whole frame shook with the violence of emotion. The restraint, the self control of years, was broken down. The heart, burdened for so long, found relief at last in passionate sobs and cries.

Miss Keziah said nothing, but tenderly stroked away from the hot forehead the thick hair grown gray with sorrow. There was sympathy in every touch.

"You are so different from the rest," said Mrs Denton, when at length she had grown calm enough to speak. "The others who have come to me have driven me nearly mad with their well meaning advice. Not one of them knew what I suffered, not one could understand my grief. When my boy, my Edgar, the last of all my children was ill, no one came near me—the disease was contagious, they said. I nursed him alone. Alone I saw him die, followed him alone to his grave. Could I believe their words of sympathy after that? Ah, Miss Keziah, words could give you no idea of all that I have suffered. One by one every joy of my life has left me. One by one my children were taken from me, until only Edgar was left. How I loved him! How I depended upon him to atone for all I had suffered. How I dreamed over him! Idle dreams, foreshadowing happiness that was never to be mine. Then he was taken, and I was left to sink into despair. I wanted only to die, to join my dear ones where no suffering could ever touch me again. My heart yearned for sympathy. I would have welcomed it. But those that came to me came because they thought it their duty, not from love or kindness. Not one of them asked me to her home, or tried to make me forget my sorrows in other things. No, they reminded me of them, and preached patience and resignation."

"They acted according to their lights," said charitable Miss Keziah. "They have led easy, pleasant lives, and did not know how to deal with such sorrow as yours."

"But you knew," said Mrs Denton, in a low voice.

"Yes," answered Miss Keziah. "I know, because I have suffered, too."

They sat talking by the fire until nearly midnight, and then retired to rest. Mrs Denton, for the first time since Edgar's death, offered up a silent, earnest prayer before she fell asleep. Her heart was no longer hardened.

She did not go back to her cottage the next morning, as she had expected, for Miss Keziah's rheumatism had been increased by her late walk of the previous evening, and she was unable to leave her bed. For many days she was utterly helpless, and during that time was tenderly nursed by Mrs. Denton, who also made herself generally useful in the house, and directed the work of the farm with care and decision. When Miss Keziah got well, she was so much pleased with the way things had been managed during her enforced illness that she made a proposition to Mrs. Denton.

"Suppose you take the place of my sister Jane," she said, "and stay right along with me. I need somebody, as you see, and what's the use of both of us living lonely when we can be company for each other as well as not? You'd take a deal of comfort in Hetty, too. I believe you love her now most as well as I do."

"She seems like my own little Bertha come to me," said Mrs. Denton. "But, O, Miss Keziah, I ought not to accept your kindness, I have been so hard, so wicked, so rebellious, I do not deserve that such good should come to me."

"We differ about that; but we won't argue it," said Miss Keziah. "I want you and you'd like to stay, so the thing is settled. You are my partner from this day on."

The next Sunday the good people of Briarville were surprised to see Mrs. Denton in Miss Keziah's pew at church, and in attendance at prayers in the evening.

"How did you manage it?" asked Mrs Bliss, as she stopped Miss Keziah in the vestibule of the church.

"Oh, I asked her to tea, as I said I was going to," answered Miss Keziah, "and I guess the preserves kinder softened and sweetened her up," and she passed on to where Mrs. Denton stood ready to help her into the spring wagon.

Neither Mrs Denton nor Miss Keziah ever regretted entering into that partnership. As the years went by Miss Keziah often wondered how she should ever have managed the farm without the help of the capable, energetic woman who had "taken the place of sister Jane."

Mrs Denton was never weary of working for the comfort and prosperity of the friend who had come to her in her hour of need and led her out of the slough of despond. And happiness made her a different woman. She learned at last those lessons of patience and resignation which had seemed so hard and bitter in the first days of her sorrow. Despair, rebellion and repining gave place in her heart to hope and tenderness. She grew at last to love only tender, gentle memories of the loved ones who had left her, and she proved a kind, judicious guardian to little Hetty when, warm hearted Miss Keziah had passed away from earth.—The Standard

THE LIVER.

The Unusual Attention which this Organ is now Attracting from the American People.

Its Delicate Structure and Susceptibility to Injury from Wounds or Disease.

In the opinion of the ancients the liver was the seat of the affections and of the passions. Modern research, however, has shown this to be an error, and hence less attention and care have been bestowed on this organ than in the early days when it was supposed to play so important a part in making war and cajoling love. Undoubtedly the discovery of the fact that the liver is not the seat of the affections and of the passions has led the people, as is natural, to neglect what formerly was an object of great solicitude, but the truth still remains that though it may not be the special seat of love and passion, it is after all of the greatest importance in physical health.

During the past few weeks, owing to an event of national interest, much has been said and written about kidney diseases and their treatment in this paper, and according to the Surgical History of the War of the Rebellion, of the thousands of cases of wounds in the liver, not above sixty survive, and they were not violent ones. The record is filled with recoveries from gun shot wounds in the head, the lungs and the pelvic region, but it is a miracle when one survives even an ordinary wound in the liver. No better proof is needed of the delicacy of its structure, nor of its extreme susceptibility to injuries, than a violent stroke, like a gunshot wound, or as the result of disease. Of course injury from a wound produces speedy results, and those of disease may affect the patient for years, and render his life a long continued burden, the sum of suffering eventually reaching

The structure of the liver is delicate, as it yet rings it is composed of two lobes, which lie directly under the right lung, and is of a soft character. When the venous blood is circulating from the various parts of the body to the lungs to be cleansed, this organ, and is there relieved of its rank poisons, part of which are used for digestion and part for a cathartic of the waste material of the food we eat. If the organ is at all diseased these poisons remain in it, instead of being used as nature designed and with every coursing of the blood through the lobes of the liver, the nature of the disease is intensified, and I can safely say that a disorder in the organ is almost certain to bring on chronic liver disease, so terrible to contemplate. In curing liver troubles it is only necessary to cause the liver to throw off its poisons, and it must be prevented from contracting other diseases, and the agency used must have such power with the kidneys and lung (the other two purifiers of the blood) that it will, while restoring the impaired liver, give to them strength sufficient to do part of the purifying work of the diseased organ. There is a peculiar dependency between the kidneys and liver and no remedy can be of benefit which does not reach upon both at the same time. The reason why so little success has hitherto been reached in the treatment of liver disease is because the philosophy of treatment has been lame and the remedies employed have been inadequate. It is acknowledged that at until within the past few years there has been no known remedy for the kidney diseases, or the liver troubles, for it was conceded that if at until the liver could be restored to its right action the kidneys were affected. It is a fact that when the liver is diseased the kidneys are also troubled, hence it follows that liver diseases are hard to cure, simply because the doctors know of no agency which will at once and the same time operate on both the kidneys and the liver.

Admitting then, that no form of treatment can be effective which does not seek to reach both the liver and the kidneys at the same time, it would be strange, indeed, if all the researches of this century had been so all in vain. The doctors have failed to find out anything to offer, but in spite of scientific ignorance and impatience they discovered by chance a purely vegetable remedy whose success in the cure of the most obstinate cases of kidney disease and liver complaint has astonished the entire civilized world. Wherever this remedy has been introduced it has become a household necessity, and its reputation as a specific for all diseases of the liver and kidneys is established upon a firmer basis than that of any other medicine in the world. It is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the discovery of a practitioner, who for years has made the diseases of the kidneys and liver a specialty. It is worth its weight in gold to the world. It does not claim to be a universal restorer of the kidneys and liver, as it is not when disease is cured in one of these organs it cannot go to the other, but is entirely overpowered from the system.

The symptoms of kidney and liver difficulties are great and unnatural weariness, headache, belching of wind, food from the stomach, constant bilious fever, displacements and inflammation of the sexual organs of women, a sallow countenance, skin eruptions, and the especially fatal complaints of the kidneys. These troubles are caused principally by malaria, which is, at the present time, becoming so great an evil in this land—so much so that President Paul A. Chadbourne, of Williams College, has just published a long and interesting article on the subject, revealing the startling fact that malarial poisons appear in all localities, the high and dry, the low and damp, in the crowded city and the sparsely settled country, and there are no differences as to the effects produced. Malaria is in the water we drink, in the air we breathe, in the food we eat, and while constantly and naturally increasing with the growth of the country, it is just at present afflicting us, as it certainly did a few years ago, as a wide-spread and dangerous epidemic. Prof. Chadbourne is not an alarmist and what he says is so firmed by other distinguished medical authorities.

What, therefore, can be the cause for this terrible increase of malaria in all parts of the States and Territories? Unquestionably the drinking water used in every portion of the land is the most active agency for carrying malaria into the system. This water may be clear, but it has become poisoned by filtration through the vaults, cesspools and graveyards in the cities, and other impure agencies in the city. Heretofore the Western States and Territories and almost the entire South have been considered the field of malaria, owing to dampness and to the poor drainage in many localities and the consequent accumulation of green poisonous matter. This theory is, however, now exploded, because malarial poisoning is becoming just as common in other regions, and those which have been settled hundreds of years. Nor are low lands alone subject to malaria, for it is found in the Berkshire Hills of New England and up among the snows of the Rocky Mountains.

Whatever may be the cause of malaria, its existence is a terribly established fact, and so much so that it is attracting the attention of the leading physicians, scientists and scholars in every portion of America. By means of its blighting powers the blood becomes poisoned and the most terrible diseases follow. The special field for the operation of this poison is in the liver. If this organ is at all diseased, malaria seizes it with a death grip. It is therefore absolutely necessary to keep the liver in perfect condition and especially at this time. The elements of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure are exactly fitted for just this very purpose. Composed of a pure and simple vegetable extract, and prepared in the most careful manner, it has been the means of restoring more people to health within the past year than any other agency known in the land. Prof. S. A. Lattimore, Ph. D., LL. D., one of the analysts of foods and medicines for the New York State Board of Health, pronounces its elements and composition purely vegetable, neither poisonous nor injurious, and the manufacturers present it to the public with the utmost faith that if taken faithfully and persistently, according to the directions, it will cure every form of liver disease and kidney disorder.

There seems to be a constant struggle between mankind and disease. Malarial poison, with its insidious power, the influences of heat, cold, bad water and impure food, all combine to undermine the health and strength, both of which are the privilege of the race. In order to counteract these terrible influences the greatest care is required, especially at the present time, in guarding the kidneys and liver, which are the governors of the system. How this can best be done has been outlined above, and as such it is cordially recommended to all as the most efficient means for securing the best of health and continued happiness.
